

Open Choice

Nano Research offers authors the opportunity to have the articles published with Open Access under the Creative Commons Attribution Non-Commercial License in exchange for paying a basic fee of €2200/$3000. Choosing open access means making your journal article freely and permanently available to everyone, everywhere.

For more information on Open Choice, please refer to the link below:

<http://www.springer.com/openchoice>

Order open access for your article:

After your article has been accepted for publication:

- After your article is accepted, please inform the Editorial Office that you will choose open access publication.
- The Editorial Office will contact you and provide the DOI of your article as well as the OA license agreement for you to sign.
If you opt for Open Choice, you are not required to transfer copyright. Open access articles which are ordered through the Open Choice program are clearly identified as open access – in the article PDF and HTML, in the article metadata and in the article display at SpringerLink.
- Please fill out and submit the OA order form at the website <http://www.springer.com/manualopenchoiceorder>
After receiving the OA order form, Springer will invoice the open access publication charge.